

SCOUTMASTER'S MINUTE • PERSEVERANCE

The Rain That Didn't Stop Us

After a Hard Campout

Summer Camp

It rained for most of this trip. We could have packed it in early. Instead, this troop adjusted, found shelter, kept the program going, and most of you will probably remember this as one of the more memorable campouts of the year — not despite the rain, but partly because of it. The trips that go perfectly are forgettable. The ones where you had to adapt are the ones you'll actually tell stories about.